Mike Pavol is a Philadelphia artist. He holds a Bachelor of Arts in Architecture from Virginia Tech. Pavol attended courses at Fleischer and Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts where he was influenced by the work of Christine Lafuente, and her enthusiastic pursuit of observation and paint. In 2002, a show of Edwin Dickinson's work guided Pavol to become less academic in his artistic choices and instead instill his own concerns and ideas into his works. Pavol has a continued interest in changing the scale of images, as well as exploring pattern and repetition. This will be evident in his portion of the exhibition, Repetition & Adaptations. When reflecting on his artistic inspiration, Pavol recalls childhood memories of his father: "Although he was not an artist (he was a high school math teacher) he would create 3-D mathematical constructs from salvaged items. His lack of convention and pragmatic approach to sometimes poetic things seemed magical to me."

Repetition & Adaptations/Ordinary Life, Up Close

Kathleen Joffrion is a product of South Louisiana, where she lived and worked as an illustrator and art director in New Orleans for 40 years before moving to Harrisburg in 2019. Joffrion's ancestors were French and Spanish people who settled on Bayou LaFourche near the Mississippi River. She is the daughter of an accountant, the granddaughter of a commercial beekeeper, and the third of 13 children. All of these factors have formed the way Joffrion sees the world. "I believe that the most ordinary people and things, upon closer viewing, often are quite remarkable," she explains. It is this personal ethos that she captures and shares in her paintings – the extraordinary is often found in the ordinary. In Ordinary Life, Up Close Joffrion will take the viewer on a journey from her native home of Louisiana to her present home of Pennsylvania. The exhibit will be divided into three bodies of work: Wetlands which details life in the salt marsh along Louisiana's Gulf Coast; Outside, an exploration of the beauty and colors found in Pennsylvania's native flora; and Genus & Species which illuminates Joffrion's background as a graphic designer and teacher of typography.

Annual "Figuratively Speaking" Exhibition Open Until February 15

The 2024 Figuratively Speaking Exhibition opened on January 12 and remain on view through February 15. This year is not to be missed! Anne Davis is the exhibition sponsor, and Free the Tweeds will provide the music during the reception.

The prizes for the exhibition have been provided by: Sutliff Volkswagen (watercolors), LB Smith Ford (photos), Alan Hostetler Insurance (Pastels & Drawings), Kathy Marley-Dunbar (oils & acrylics), Art Depot (other media), Silvers Family Dental Care (sculpture & ceramics), Paul & Mary Lundeen (best of show). The prize juror is Debbie Smith, owner of Smith Custom Framing & Gallery.

Nate Foster Rises to the Occasion

NATE
FOSTER

With the resignation of AAH Curator Rachel O'Connor in December, Sales Gallery Manager Nate Foster has assumed the position of Director of Exhibitions, combining the management of the Sales Gallery with the responsibilities of curating the exhibitions in the main AAH galleries. He will also work closely with President Wissler-Thomas in coordinating and presenting the extensive Community Show program. The community shows total 60+ annually in 14 venues throughout the area.

With the 2024 gallery schedule of exhibitions already committed under Rachel O'Connor, Nate Foster will be selecting the exhibitions for 2025 and beyond. He and Carrie Wissler-Thomas work together to manage the AAH school, recruiting new instructors and identifying new class opportunities so we are excited to see what Nate chooses, given his institutional knowledge.

“Art Is....” was the Theme of the Fall Membership Show in 2023

By Rachel Haas-Gutin

The 2023 Fall Membership Show, titled “Art is...,” rehashed a question every artist and art lover has pondered, argued, and lost the point of time and again. Some are plagued by this question; it keeps them up at night as they try to compose themselves in front of the vacant canvas. Some ignore it completely and see it only as a deterrent to true expression, a polarizing distraction. Some object, “How dare you define art!,” while others contest, “How dare you homogenize it!” Is it possible to separate the saved from the sinners, the real visionaries from the frauds? Can you tell the difference? Is there one?

When we think about the definition of art, we aren’t imagining its forms. We know how art is portrayed, how it is created, but what we search for is an affirmation that something is worthy enough to be considered “art.” There are classifications, credits, price tags that attempt to validate the authority of a piece of art, but you might still think that piece is trash. Or, you could find literal trash on the street and be shocked it’s not hanging in galleries. Either way, there is no messiah, no holy scripture that can dictate indisputably the hows and whys for what is and isn’t art.

Who is an artist? Maybe it’s someone who’s so self-serving they can’t imagine a world sans their work on display. Maybe it’s someone who’s so selfless they give themselves and their talent away to the masses; they are just a vessel for inspiration and perception to filter through and materialize onto paper. Something tells me you can’t have one without the other, even in the same person. In a world of opposites, duality becomes the North Star that guides us. Someone who says they have all the right answers means they don’t. Someone who asks questions and asserts their ignorance in an effort to learn is someone to listen to. In a creative sphere built on subjectivity, anyone telling you “this can only be one thing” is telling a joke and you should laugh.

In middle school, my music teacher told me there were three things that made music music, as opposed to just sounds. The most important point made (to me) was, “Music is considered music if the musician intended it to be heard as such,” which made no sense to a room of ten year olds. In our haze of confusion, he played an orchestra tuning their instruments all at once. There was no rhythm or tune to follow, just chaotic unsynchronized sounds which made the whole lesson click. We imbue art with its value through our intentions. Art is art if that’s how the maker wanted the audience to view it. That audience might be the artist alone and they couldn’t care less about your opinion. It’s a blessing to not have to be right.

A Parting Note from our Curator

With deep consideration, I have decided that it is time for me to resign from my position as Curator of the Art Association of Harrisburg.

The AAH was my first post-college job. I began as the administrative assistant, and 6 years ago was promoted to the role of curator. It has been one of my greatest honors to serve artists, and collaborate with many of you as we bring your work into public view. Thank you for entrusting me with your vision – I never took it lightly. Art is an agent of redemption and reconciliation, be it through providing respite for a weary soul, adding beauty and joy to our world, calling for action and change, exploring one's identity, or bettering one's work through consistent practice.

For the last decade, it has been a joy and privilege to see the many ways each of you are making our world a better place. I hope we meet again in the near future.

With gratitude and respect,
Rachel O'Connor

The poster is framed by a thick, glowing gold border with a beaded light effect. The background is dark, with red curtains on the left and right sides. In the center, the title "BROADWAY BOUND" is written in large, red, dotted letters, slanted upwards. Below it, the word "Gala" is written in a red, cursive font. Two white silhouettes of dancers are positioned on either side of the title. The text "A Broadway-Themed Evening Benefiting The Art Association of Harrisburg" is centered below the title. A yellow horizontal line separates this from the date and time information. The date "SATURDAY, APRIL 6TH, 2024" and time "6:00 - 10:00 PM" are centered in white, bold, sans-serif font. Below this, the venue "COUNTRY CLUB OF HARRISBURG" is centered in the same font. Another yellow horizontal line separates this from the name of the honorary chair. The name "David Volkman" and title "Honorary Chair" are centered in white, sans-serif font. At the bottom center, there is a logo for the Art Association of Harrisburg, which consists of the letters "Aa" stacked above "h" in a stylized font, enclosed in a white square. The bottom of the poster shows rows of red theater seats.

2024 AAH School Update

The Art Association clay programs held in the studios in Reservoir Park, that we rent from the City, are burgeoning, with classes filled each semester. However, with the number of students and all the clay objects to be fired constantly, our old kilns have finally “bitten the dust.”

Thankfully, our generous patrons Seward and Debra Ryan have come to the rescue, and are donating the monies to cover the purchase of two new kilns! One will be installed in the hand-building studio used by Nicholas Boone and Clay for Kids teacher Mellissa Ross, and the other will be installed in the wheel studio, where Jerald Phoenix and Veronica Bauer teach. Clay sculpture teacher Mark Walter will have his students’ work fired in the new kilns as well. The new kilns should arrive in late February.

AAH continues our warm relationship with the City – in December Barbara Passeri Warfel taught a senior citizens drawing class in the Brownstone in Reservoir Park, followed by a senior citizens acrylics painting class with Carrie Feidt in January. In February, Carrie Feidt will teach a kids’ class in the Brownstone through the City of Harrisburg.

A second summer Art in the Park program for youth is planned as well, with Carrie Feidt and Allison Juliana again as instructors.
